Bibliography of Academic Writings, updated 13 December 2021

Included here are my writings of all kinds that have some relevance to academic research, teaching or related pursuits. I have not included references to single or small groups of my photographs, which have appeared in a wide range academic and popular publications, but have listed “photo essays.” Generally unchanged reprints or translations of earlier published work are not listed as separate entries. The list is arranged in reverse chronological order by year, starting with work which is forthcoming or in press (that is, reasonably certain to appear in the foreseeable future) and then moving from most recent to earliest work. Since exact publication dates are generally uncertain, within any given year, the ordering may not be exact. I have coded each item number to indicate the nature of the publication; works in hard copy print are interspersed with those in electronic form. Where possible I provide links to electronic versions of the work but have not hyperlinked them — the URLs can be copied and pasted into a browser. For recent work, if there are copies in different locations on-line, I usually give only one URL. Most of the recent publications (some exceptions still to be posted), may be downloaded from my personal website <<http://faculty.washington.edu/dwaugh/>>. I include on this list “self-published” work if it has been placed where it can be freely accessed and in some cases thereby has been widely disseminated.

The abbreviations for the type of publication are:

- B1* Singly authored or edited book.
- B2* Co-authored, co-edited book; book for which I am credited with significant editorial contributions.
- A1* Scholarly article or occasional paper.
- A2* General interest article (e.g., web essay, encyclopedia article, photo essay).
- AE* Edited or translated article. (Note: unless they are translations, articles published in The Silk Road, in which I often made significant editorial contributions, are not listed below. Each volume of the whole journal is though, since it represents a significant component in my academic production.)
- R* Book review.
- RA* Review article.
- SC* Short communication: review notice, editorial, short obituary, letter to editor.

The distinctions between “reviews” and “review notices” are rather ill-defined, though I generally think of the former as ones where I feel I have the requisite expertise to do a real critique of the work; the latter may be more in the way of summary, even if longer than some of the reviews and not always lacking in critical comments. “Review article” generally means a longer essay than the typical academic review, but not necessarily a review of multiple books. “Short communications” are just that, included here where they served the purpose of providing useful information to those with whom I share academic interests. Many of these currently have been posted to H-EarlySlavic and most recently to the ESSA mailing list. However, I have not listed contributions to ongoing on-line discussions such as occasionally take place on H-EarlySlavic.
