

Week 4 Group – Reading Questions

1. Proponents of H-1B visas generally argue that the program aids the American economy, not necessarily American work environments. In lieu of our recent discussions on H-1B visas, and this week's reading on "death march projects", what role would you say, if any, do H-1B visa workers play in the demands of domestic workers?
 2. What are the ethical implications of the death march reading? How does the author imply ethical choices are what make and break "death march projects"? Specifically, what types of ethical decision make the projects and what types of ethical decisions break the projects?
 3. In Death March reading, the author discusses on why rational people would willing to participate in death march projects. What aspects/factors are required for a person to be considered as a rational person in this context?
