

The Chinese Economy/The Global Economy
International Conferences, II

March 15 and 16, 2013
University of Tokyo, Tokyo, Japan

The Department of Economics of the University of Tokyo, the Research Center for International Economics (RCIE) at the University of Washington, and the Asia-Pacific Economic Association are jointly organizing two conferences:

(a) “China and the World Economy” March 15, 2013

Some possible topics (not limited to) to be considered:

- labor market and issues in China
- monetary and fiscal policies
- financial markets and issues in China
- foreign trade and issues
- foreign direct investment, inward and outward
- economic growth and development
- environment and economics
- industrial structure and development
- international issues and issues of other economies related to China
- technology and economics
- comparative economic systems and socialism

(b) “Global Economy” March 16, 2013

Some possible topics (not limited to) to be considered:

- international economics: theory and empirical studies
- trade policies; monetary and fiscal policies
- cross-country comparison and studies
- international economic organizations
- international environment and economics
- foreign direct investment (inward or outward)
- international labor migration
- international technology transfer and intellectual property rights
- global economic issues
- cross-country externality
- international economic disputes and settlement

Papers presented will be considered for publication in one of the following two journals: China Economic Policy Review (CEPR) and Global Journal of Economics (GJE).

Please send your submission of paper(s) (abstract or draft of a paper) by January 15, 2013 to Shin-ichi Fukuda <sfukuda2@e.u-tokyo.ac.jp>. In the submission, please indicate which conference and which journal the paper is submitted to. More information about the conferences and the journals is available at <http://faculty.washington.edu/karyiu/confer/tokyo13/index.htm>.