

Journals

10/24/06

All SLP faculty members agreed that of the ASHA journals, Journal of Speech, Language and Hearing Research (JSHLR) is the most rigorous, followed by American Journal of Speech-Language Pathology (AJSLP) and Language, Speech, and Hearing Services in the Schools (LSHSS) (in that order). All will contain clinically useful information; however, AJSLP and LSHSS are geared particularly for disseminating clinical information.

Below are titles of journals that the faculty views as good resources for evidence based practice. Note that the first entry or two will be for journals of the highest quality. Some journals really are more clinically oriented; they will be marked with **.
