A Pathway from UWT to High School Teaching

This presentation will address the speaker's background as a Writing Studies Major and Mathematics Minor at UW Tacoma, a description of an average day as a teacher in Los Angeles Unified School District, and the necessary educational pathways to achieve a credentialed teaching position in California. Additionally, participants will take part in a math exploration activity designed to help precalculus and algebra 2 students in high school understand the concept of radian measure for angles.

Common core links, best practices for teaching, and methodology will be discussed.
