Indian Wisdom

Chief Luther Standing Bear
Hoof-thick furs made them more resistant to extreme heat and cold. The length and hairiness of their tails helped to protect them from cold temperatures. The long, thick tails were also used for protection against predators.

True, the bison were like elephants in size and form, but they were not as slow or lumbering. They were swift, powerful animals that could run at speeds up to 60 miles per hour. When必须了 to escape predators, they would stampede and trample their enemies, creating a wall of hooves that was impossible to stop.

When musted, the bison herds would charge at the intruders with a ferocity that was both terrifying and awe-inspiring. They would charge headlong at the intruders, their massive bodies reverberating with the sound of hooves. The bison were not afraid to die for their herd or their land, and they fought with a tenacity that was unmatched.

The bison were the kings of the plains, and they ruled with a strict code of law and order. They were fiercely protective of their territory, and they would not tolerate any intruders. Those who dared to challenge the bison were met with a fierce and deadly retaliation.

The bison were a symbol of strength, resilience, and courage, and they will always be remembered as one of the great natural wonders of the world.
